Institute of Peace & Conflict Studies

The Institute of Peace and Conflict Studies (IPCS) was founded in 1996 by Professor PR Chari and Maj Gen Dipankar Banerjee (Retd) with the objective of creating policy alternatives on peace and security issues for South Asia and the wider neighbourhood. It is one of India's oldest independent think-tanks. Through its research and programming on security and foreign policy, IPCS has established its interest—and credentials—in driving innovative, independent, and impactful policy solutions. IPCS has extensive and demonstrated experience in the capacity-building of emerging thought leaders; pioneering research on sensitive security issues; convening strategic dialogues; and building sustainable institutional relationships through its longstanding global reach.
