HIGHWAY TO HELL

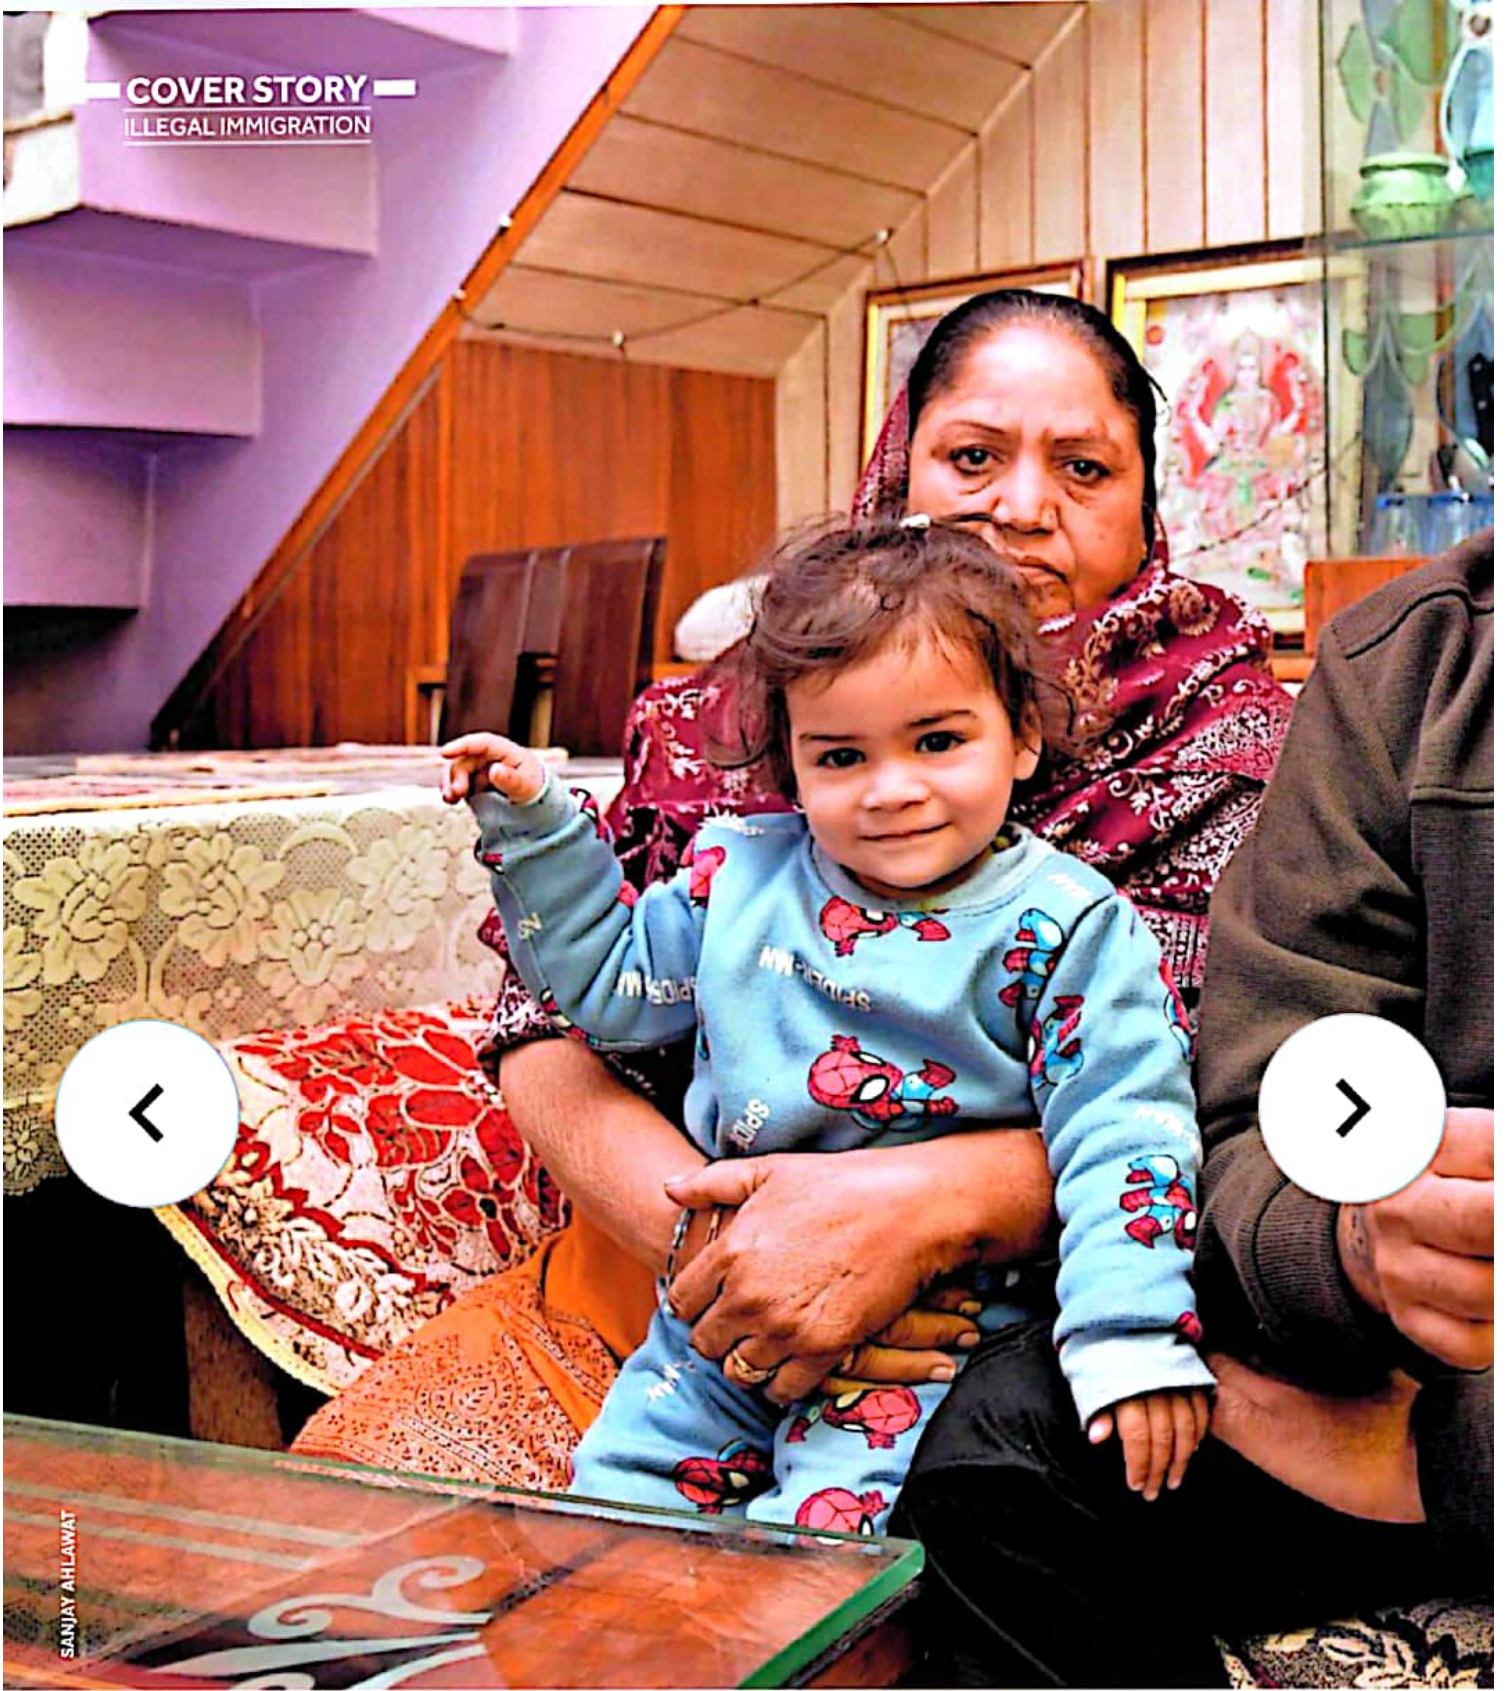

Horror stories of Indians who took the perilous passage to the US, aided by shady agents

EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW

This is a made-up invasion

In villages across Punjab and Haryana, lure of dollars and pressure of unemployment have fuelled the drive to reach the US, often with the help of human traffickers and shady agents. Those dreams are now shattered, with Donald Trump treating illegal immigration as “invasion”, and sending them back in chains
