COVER STORY 18

BUILT FROM FURY

In her latest book, author Arundhati Roy explores the many facets of her mother, Mary Roy—her courage, charm, warmth and even her venom. She reflects that she is shaped from the fragments of her mother's fury. The daughter, Arundhati suggests, is not an extension of the mother, but a response to her.

The flag has to be flown with due respect and dignity. The laws which make disrespect of the flag punishable are still extant. Yet disrespect abounds: flags are heaped by sellers on the pavements; at a paan shop, the saffron is dipping towards the ground; at a show, a dancer holds it upside down. National flags wilt and fray in the rain, they fade in the sharp sun.
