10 | ALL FALL DOWN

The march of the saffron party has been relentless in the East. It has moved through the cracks left behind by ageing regional satraps, turning every faultline into a foothold
By Snigdendu Bhattacharya

19 | THE SINGLE POLE OF POWER

Regional strongholds are turning into besieged fortresses, facing the relentless advance of the BJP with the ambition and machinery to occupy the national centre almost alone
By Mohammad Ali

26 | SOUTHERN DISCOMFITURE

If Kerala's demographic composition is often cited as a structural roadblock to the BJP's expansion, Tamil Nadu presents a contrasting case
By N.K. Bhoopesh

34 | DECLAWING THE TIGER

The BJP didn't just defeat the Shiv Sena; they dismantled it from within
By Jinit Parmar

16 | THE ALGEBRA OF EXPANSION

The emerging political order reflects a form of federalism in which regional voices still matter—but national priorities will prevail
By Mahendra Kumar Singh

30 | BEYOND REGIONALISM

At the systemic level, the BJP is not just defeating regional parties; it is redefining their space and narrowing their horizons unless they adapt structurally and culturally
By Ashwani Kumar
