Battle for Medical Colleges

The proposed transfer of 17 newly sanctioned government medical colleges in Andhra Pradesh to private operators under a public–private partnership model has triggered statewide mobilisations. page 10

Caste and Care Work

Existing dominant methodologies, such as time-use surveys, fail to capture the caste-based stratification of care work, particularly the unpaid and underpaid labour carried out by lower-caste women. page 24

Begging in India

The NHRC advisory reasonably recognises begging as a product of systemic failure of social institutions, rather than merely a socio-economic problem, and proposes a road map for a statewide entitlement-based policy. page 34

Action against Hunger

The Government of West Bengal's poverty alleviation programme was extended to the abandoned tea plantations, where the majority are tribal communities, who faced extreme levels of hunger and starvation. page 49

Human–Wildlife Relations

The implications of changing human–wildlife relations in Wayanad are severe and include life threats to both humans and wildlife, loss of income, crop raiding, property damage, loss of peace of mind, and reduced community support in conservation efforts. page 63

Public Good or Private Gain?

10 The proposed transfer of 17 newly sanctioned government medical colleges in Andhra Pradesh to private operators under a public-private partnership model has triggered statewide mobilisations. — Sambaiah Gundimeda

Development or Disaster?

13 A look into the Ken-Betwa Link Project raises questions about the very concept and efficacy of interlinking rivers. — Sudeshna Ghosh

Legislating for (In)justice?

17 The ongoing tussle between Adivasi activists and the government in Jharkhand over the draft Provisions of the Panchayats (Extension to the Scheduled Areas) Act, 1996 rules is mired in distrust and misunderstanding. — Sujit Kumar, Neil Tannen

Footloose Labour and the e-Shram Portal

20 Questions remain about the efficacy of the e-Shram portal in acknowledging migrants as citizens, particularly around concerns of accessibility, universalisation, and transparency. — Taniya Banerjee, Manoranjan Dhal

Caste and Care Work

24 Existing methodologies, such as time-use surveys, fail to capture the caste-based stratification of care work, particularly the unpaid and underpaid labour carried out by lower-caste women. — Varghese Daigy, Boddu Srujana

Rethinking the Governance of Begging

34 The 2024 National Human Rights Commission advisory, which reasonably recognises begging as a product of systemic failures of social institutions, needs to enable the creation of a context-sensitive and rights-compliant framework. — Aejaz Ahmad Wani, Ekta Shaikh

COVID-19, Investor Diversification, and Sovereign Yields

41 The demand-side diversification away from banks played a crucial role in lessening the impact of rising supply-side pressures on bond yields during the pandemic, resulting in a 39% reduction in bond yield sensitivity to new debt supply in the post-pandemic period. — Amit Pawar, Mayank Gupta, Abhinandan Borad, Subrat Kumar Seet & Deba Prasad Rath

Community Kitchens in Plantations of Bengal

49 The State Action against Hunger and Inequality, a poverty-alleviation programme of the Government of West Bengal, was extended to the abandoned tea plantations in the Dooars region, where the tea plantation communities, the majority of whom are tribals, were facing extreme levels of hunger and starvation. — Bikash Das, Daksha Parmar

FPOs and the Technical Efficiency of Vegetable Crops

56 Farmer producer organisation members consistently achieve higher crop outputs, with significant differences in input utilisation. FPO membership is strongly associated with higher technical efficiency, especially for brinjal and potato farming. — Diksha Bali, Jyoti Kachroo & Abdulla

Indigenous People and Human-Wildlife Relations

63 The experiences and perceptions of various indigenous communities living in the Wayanad Wildlife Sanctuary towards changing human-wildlife interactions are examined. Community-specific, livelihood-focused, and micro-level mitigation measures are required to arrive at sustainable solutions for mitigating the crisis. — Vipindas P, Seetha Kakkoth

Postscript

72 Sreedeeep Bhattacharya on how death intrudes differently into the lives of two photographers in Palermo Shooting and Blow Up; Nithya Mariam John's poem, "The Betta," and Last Lines by Ponnappa.
